

Introducing a better way to keep community members informed

It's a faster, easier method of giving board members, homeowners and residents access to current information

Benefits include:

- Convenient web access from home, office or on the road
- Fewer paper notices means less trash on premises
- Postings automatically expire, so content is never out of date
- Any user can post. No waiting for the webmaster to update the site!
- Administrative users maintain complete control over all site content
- As users register, your resident directory builds automatically

Typical uses:

HOA boards use it for meetings, announcements and notices:

- "Annual meeting is July 17th @ 7:00pm in the clubhouse"
- "Water is shut off until noon while a broken water line is repaired."

Owners and residents use it for classifieds, notices and news:

- "I have 2 tickets for the Steelers vs Cardinals. $80/obo"
- "Lost Pet! Our miniature schnauzer, Fred, has gone missing!"

Why it's better:

Dedicated community websites are notoriously out-of-date. They create a huge bottleneck by using one webmaster for the entire community. Even worse, they load it up with features most residents don't need: Recipes of the month, RSS news feeds, and photo albums.

We took a simpler approach. Only offer the features a community really needs; which seemed to be everything we'd find posted near the mailboxes, taped to a lamp post or stuck in your door jamb. Now it's easily accessible online!

HOAsite.net offers residents, owners and board members the most cost-effective and efficient way to communicate with their neighbors.

How to get started:

1. Visit www.HOASITE.NET
2. Enter your zip code and a listing of communities will appear.
3. Select your community. If it is not already there, you can create it.
4. Register as a member and you're in! It's really that easy.
